Transitions IQ Network Sponsorship

For Health Plans

Shared Real-Time Member Visibility for Plans
and the Providers in Their Networks

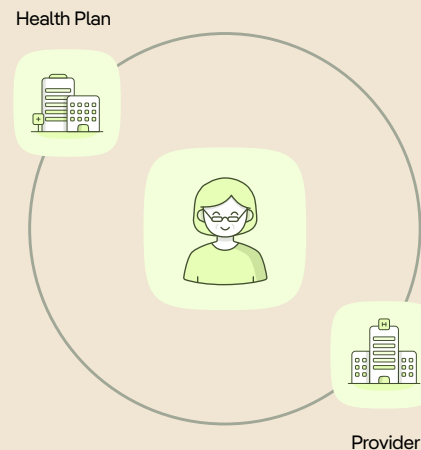

Plans and the providers in their networks are both accountable for member outcomes, but they work from different views of the same member. Real-time information moves through manual workflows, and coordination on the highest-risk members suffers.

Care teams are working from different views of the same member. Bring plans and providers into one real-time source of truth.

Transitions IQ Network Sponsorship aligns plans and the providers in their networks around one real-time view of every member — the same signals when members enter care settings, and the same shared insights that make transitions of care coordinated.

Built on PCC's real-time, nationwide EHR-agnostic network.

How Network Sponsorship Aligns Plans and Providers

Align Plans and Providers

Both sides see the same real-time signals and clinical context — and act from the same information.

Power Risk Performance

Equip value-based and shared-risk arrangements with the real-time visibility they need to perform.

Strengthen Your Network

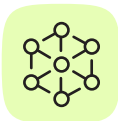

Give providers the real-time member visibility that strengthens their work and your partnership.

Key Features

Plans and providers see every member transition together

- Real-time ADT alerts reach plans and providers in your network simultaneously, the moment a member's care setting changes.
- Notifications surface the transitions that warrant action and reach care teams with the clinical context they need to respond.
- Both sides operate from the same signal at the same time — without portal-switching or reconciling two versions of events.

Align your network around the populations your contracts measure

- Configure cohorts around chronic conditions, HEDIS follow-up, readmission risk, and the populations named in your value-based contracts.
- Automated daily reports surface the members within each population who need follow-up most urgently.
- Plan and provider care teams work from a shared, prioritized list — not separate workflows.

Operate as one care team across the plan and the network

- Care plans, follow-up information, and coordination notes live in one shared space that both sides update together.
- Member context — history, engagement details, contact info — follows the member across every care team touchpoint.
- Plans and providers jointly build a single source of truth on every member, instead of working in parallel through manual workflows.
